The Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center is a major center for teaching, research, and world-class medical care. Comprised of the Columbia University Health Sciences Division, the New York-Presbyterian Hospital and the New York State Psychiatric Institute, the Center provides programs that serve the Washington Heights/Inwood and Harlem communities. These programs provide a variety of services that are designed to address the health and educational needs of the communities we serve.

The Center has many dedicated faculty, doctors and staff who understand the community and who want to work collaboratively with it to improve the health and quality of life of the community’s residents. We understand that the work of the Center is interrelated with the work of the community. For this reason we have expanded our community guide to include both institutional/community programs as well as community programs run by organizations in our neighborhood. This new guide will familiarize staff, students, administrators and clinicians, as well as community leaders, activists, residents and elected officials with the numerous programs that make this a great community. It is a valuable tool for both institutions and communities to provide better service to the Washington Heights/Inwood and Harlem communities.

The State Pre-College Enrichment Program (S-Prep) is a rigorous academic program for minority students, in grades 9 through 12, who are seriously interested in medicine or related health professions. S-Prep offers a schedule of basic and medical science courses structured to place emphasis on the teaching of laboratory skills. The courses currently offered are general chemistry, biochemistry, behavioral science, molecular biology/genetics, neuroscience, anatomy, physics and microbiology. Career counseling and college admission workshops are held during the year with representatives from Columbia College and other area institutions. Site visits and other extracurricular activities are planned during the academic year. Overall school average of 85 or better and demonstrable motivation and maturity are required.

The goal of The Summer High School Minority Student/Teacher Initiative Program is to stimulate support and interest among minority high school students in biomedical research and the health professions as career choices. Ten students are selected annually to participate in the six-week summer program to conduct research under the mentorship of Columbia University Health Sciences faculty. Career counseling, college admissions workshops and scientific enrichment activities are included in the six-week experience. Overall academic average of 85 or better and demonstrable motivation and maturity are required.

The Dental Assistant Training Program was developed in collaboration with the Harlem Hospital Dental Service, Columbia University’s School of Dental and Oral Surgery, and supported in part by the Upper Manhattan Empowerment Zone. The program is tuition-free and provides twelve months of intensive academic and clinical training in all aspects of dental assisting. The goal of the program is to train professional assistants, capable of becoming state certified and valued members of any type of dental health team. The program provides students with intensive training in dental assisting computer skills necessary for dental office functions academic courses that include dental anatomy, dental radiology, dental materials, head and neck anatomy, oral pathology and dental health education, dental office management courses, and 300 hours of chairside clinic time.

The Comprehensive Dental Services for Children and Adolescents with HIV/AIDS offers compassionate care that helps keep children and adolescents healthy. The staff believes that with early detection some infections and oral complications can be treated to reduce pain and discomfort. The following services are available to HIV/AIDS infected children, adolescents, and their siblings: dental care, including thorough examination, x-rays and cleaning, instruction for practicing good oral hygiene, and follow-up check-ups to look for dental cavities, oral infections and other problems related to HIV/AIDS.
Through the Science and Technology Entry Program (STEP), New York City minority and economically disadvantaged young people are given the opportunity for self-enrichment and the chance to acquire the skills necessary to continue their education at the college level and for eventual access to licensed professions in New York. The Science and Technology Entry Program provides supplemental basic education experiences that include SAT preparation, career counseling, role modeling and tutorial sessions. All educational activities are held in structured classroom settings. Admission takes place once a year and personal interviews are required.

The Tobacco Cessation Program welcomes everyone in the Washington Heights/Inwood and Harlem communities who have a desire to quit using tobacco. The program offers a team of health professionals who will prepare participants to stop using tobacco and assist participants to live tobacco-free. An individualized program is offered to participants in a supportive and caring environment. Services are offered in both English and Spanish.

The Columbia Center for the Active Life of Minority Elders (CALME) provides minority researchers with mechanisms to enhance ties with leaders in the surrounding community and experts in the field of aging. CALME is a National Institute on Aging funded Resource Center for Minority Aging Research (RCMAR) where statisticians, methodologists and experts in the field of aging share expertise with minority researchers. The Center’s main goal is to provide opportunity, support, and guidance in the field of aging and to demonstrate pathways to bridge existing gaps in health status and care between minority and majority aging populations. Each year as a way of encouraging minority investigators, the Center presents four pilot grant awards to qualified minority investigators. Applications for pilot study awards are publicized through the Center’s newsletter and web page. The Center works closely with community leaders in the field of aging and presents research findings and health education to the community. The Center is composed of an External Advisory Board and a Community Advisory Board.

The Incarnation Children’s Center provides residential and outpatient medical care for HIV-infected children. Housed in a red brick, 4-story former convent in Washington Heights, its bedrooms, play spaces and backyard garden help to create a home like atmosphere. A dedicated and loving staff of child care workers, nurses, doctors, volunteers and others have transformed the attractive setting into a sanctuary of love. Licensed by the New York State Department of Social Services and the New York City Agency for Children’s Services, the program was established in 1988 through the collaborative efforts of The Catholic Home Bureau (Archdiocese of New York), The Columbia University Department of Pediatrics, The Harlem Hospital Pediatric AIDS Program and the Samuel and May Rudin Foundation.

Comprehensive services are provided at the Center by pediatricians, nurses, social workers, and child care staff (one to every two children). Consultants in nutrition, physical therapy, child development, mental health and bereavement counseling are provided as well. The Center offers respite care, outpatient diagnostic and medical care, access to clinical trials of new medications under the sponsorship of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease, training and education for pediatricians-in-training, students of medicine, nursing, social work and the law, parents and foster parents, and HIV/AIDS support groups for parents and older people.

The Women, Infant, Children Program (WIC) provides nutrition education, health assessment and referral, as well as supplemental food vouchers for pregnant women, infants and children under five years of age who are at nutritional or medical risk with a family income that meets federal poverty guidelines. Supplemental food vouchers are used to purchase iron-fortified formula, milk, vitamin-fortified fruit juices, cheese, eggs, beans, peanut butter and iron-fortified cereals. In addition, breastfeeding women can use their food vouchers to purchase tuna fish, carrots, and beans. The program encourages regular healthcare through referrals to private community physicians, pediatric and prenatal services within the hospital’s Ambulatory Care Network Corporation (ACNC). Referrals are also made to other healthcare agencies, such as social services and food stamps. WIC’s primary goal is to influence the health and nutritional status of women, infants, and children in this community by providing proper nutrition and healthcare during critical stages of growth and development. The program encourages regular and routine medical care and proper immunization schedules. Through nutrition education, WIC mothers learn good eating and health habits, which convey long-term benefits that continue after WIC eligibility expires.

The Presbyterian Hospital Infant & Child Care Center was founded by The Presbyterian Hospital as an expression of interest in high quality childcare for young children. Accepting infants at 2 months of age, the program provides a clean secure setting where non-walking babies can be comforted while exploring their environment. Each infant’s schedule needs are considered and reconsidered as new developmental levels are reached. Walking infants enjoy their own classroom, which is provided with equipment appropriate for developing their motor skills as well as cognitive skills. The many wonderful play activities that are presented help each infant learn while enjoying a secure and trusting relationship with caregivers and classmates.

The Lucy A. Wick Clinic for HIV Mental Health is an outpatient adult psychiatric clinic specializing in HIV/AIDS patients and people with HIV related concerns. As part of New York-Presbyterian Hospital’s ongoing commitment to improve access to medical services at the hospital, the Department of Surgery has created a streamlined program for surgery referrals for Medicaid, Medicare, and some HMO patients. Columbia Community Surgeons is a community oriented program that offers a full range of general, pediatric and vascular surgery services. The primary motivation of this group is to expedite the patient referral process by lending itself to easy communication between the referring physician and the hospital’s resident surgeons, while providing patients with high quality surgical care, education and preventive measures. The goal of the Columbia Community Surgeons is to provide a more "user-friendly" venue to surgical care, particularly for Medicaid and Medicare patients.

The Nursery Infant Toddler Day Care Center, Inc.
Lenore Lupie, Director
130 Fort Washington Avenue
New York, NY 10032
Tel: 212-740-4455 Fax: 212-740-4456

Hours: Monday through Friday
7:45 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.
Ages Served: 2 months to 5 years
Services: The Nursery Infant Toddler Day Care Center, Inc. was created to cater exclusively to infants and toddlers and their special needs. Infants and toddlers need more nurturing and one-to-one care than older children. Holding and loving are very important for babies. Equally important is allowing the child the opportunity to explore his environment with the security of qualified adults nearby. The Nursery has four classrooms. The infant room houses eight babies. The Minis are 12 to 24 months in a group of five children. The Toddlers, 2 year olds, are in a group of up to ten children. The Preschoolers, 3 and 4 year olds are in a group, not to exceed seventeen children. Because developmental stages are so varied at this point in life, the children move to the next room based on their development, not on their age. Routine is necessary in a group setting, but young children need flexibility in their day. In the infant room, the Nursery accommodates each individual child’s schedule. In the toddler room, there’s a lot of emphasis on activities for daily living. The Center offers semi-structured hands on activities throughout the day. The children are also offered a great deal of freedom. Because they learn so much at this stage of life, everything they do enhances their development. Preschoolers are offered a variety of activities. They receive simple academic lessons in preparation for kindergarten. This includes learning numbers and letters. The Center also offers music, dance, art, outdoor, and free play. In each classroom social and verbal skills are developed throughout the day as the children are involved in different activities.

Program of Study: Manhattan Christian Academy has a passion for educating children of the city and helping them fulfill their God-given destiny in this life and the next. The quality of a child’s tomorrow depends to a large extent on the education, encouragement, and support he or she receives today. If a child of the city is to thrive in our challenging times and exercise thoughtful Christ-centered leadership as an adult, the child must be prepared to fulfill his or her destiny in life. This preparation begins with knowing God and His creation, and living in submission to His will and for His glory. In addition to Godly character, it includes servant-leadership, academic excellence, communication, problem-solving skills, confidence, community service, and opportunities to realize one’s personal and career calling. Manhattan Christian Academy prepares children of the city to fulfill their destiny in time and eternity.

Program of Study: Barnard College is an independent college of liberal arts and sciences for women, affiliated with Columbia University, founded in 1889. Barnard has its own campus, faculty, administration, trustees, operating budget, and endowment. Through the Barnard-Columbia partnership, students on both campuses choose from a wide array of courses and academic resources and take part in a great variety of student organizations. Barnard has a long tradition of graduating leaders in the arts, business, government, and science. The academic program is rigorous but flexibly structured. Requirements for graduation include satisfactory completion of 120 points of academic work and two terms of physical education. Students must complete a major and fulfill general education requirements, which include the interdisciplinary First-Year Seminar, First-Year English, and courses fulfilling the nine Ways of Knowing. Bridging the traditional disciplines of the liberal arts and sciences, the Ways of Knowing provide intellectual breadth. Each student studies, from analytical, quantitative, and artistic perspectives, the major means by which human knowledge has been constructed. The curricula leads to a Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) degree awarded in about 50 fields in the humanities, social sciences, art, natural sciences, and interdisciplinary areas.

Program of Study: The City College of New York is the nation’s flagship institution of public higher education, predating the midwestern state land-grant colleges by two decades. CCNY is a microcosm of New York City, with one of the most diverse student bodies of any college in America. With nearly 11,000 students, City College is really a small university, with a College of Liberal Arts and Science and professional schools of architecture, education, engineering and the Sophie Davis School of Biomedical Education. In fact, the College offers more than 40 of its own graduate degree programs and is the site of ten of the City University of New York’s doctoral programs. Undergraduates have opportunities here that few other public colleges offer for research and direct contact with the same internationally renown faculty who supervise doctoral students. Innovative programs in environmental engineering and science, graphic design, media arts production, publishing, urban legal studies, urban architecture and pre-med are offered at the college. The City College of New York offers academic excellence, an outstanding faculty, low tuition, and a variety of extracurricular activities on a beautiful 36 acre campus in the heart of one of the greatest cities in the world.

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: A surprising mix of intellectual Ivy League atmosphere and a small college sense of community, nestled in and enriched by the diversity of New York City, Columbia is known for breaking down the walls that separate the "ivory towers" of academia from the rest of the world. Columbia College has had the best general education curriculum in the country for more than half a century. Columbia College's general education is conducted in small seminars. Although many excellent colleges offer one or two semesters of general education courses, such courses tend to be taught as large lectures in large halls filled with students taking notes. At Columbia College, students spend a substantial part of their first years in small classes, reading and discussing primary works of literature, philosophy, history, science, and social and political theory, and studying fine arts and music. Through discussion and debate, through writing, and through direct interaction between instructor and student, the core curriculum helps improve each student's ability to engage in the kinds of analytic, discursive, and imaginative thinking that will prove indispensable in both subsequent education and later in life. As a small college in a large research institution, Columbia College also offers a large array of studies, urban architecture and pre-med are offered at the college. The City College of New York offers academic excellence, an outstanding faculty, low tuition, and a variety of extracurricular activities on a beautiful 36 acre campus in the heart of one of the greatest cities in the world.

Tel: 212-927-5000 Fax: 212-543-5677

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: Established in 1945 as the first psychoanalytic institute within a university in the United States, the Center for Psychoanalytic Training and Research is a postgraduate institute that trains psychiatrists, senior psychiatric residents, and clinical psychologists in psychoanalysis. The Center's five main objectives are all facets of an integrated whole, enriching and reinforcing one another: to educate students in the theory and practice of psychoanalysis, to encourage and support psychoanalytic research, to apply psychoanalytic scholarship, and to provide high-quality, low-cost psychoanalytic treatment to the community. In addition to training in adult psychoanalysis, the Center offers training in child psychoanalysis and parent-infant psychotherapy. The Center also offers an Affiliate Scholar Program where scholars and researchers from other fields may have individually structured educational programs in psychoanalysis.

College of Physicians & Surgeons

Website: www.columbia.edu

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: The College of Physicians & Surgeons is guided by the principle that medical education is university education. The acquisition of knowledge and skills is important in professional education, but far more vital is a profound understanding of science, the art and the ethic within which both knowledge and skills are applied. As a part of Columbia University, the College builds its curriculum, selects its officers of instruction, and marshals its enormous resources of equipment and clinical experience to develop in the student this understanding of medicine. Within the curriculum for the M.D. degree is the fundamental knowledge from which the natural bent is discovered toward general or special practice, research, teaching, or administration. The postgraduate programs of the College provide training in the specialties, help the graduate physician to keep abreast of new knowledge and support the research from which the physician's knowledge develops.
of academic programs taught by faculty working at the frontiers of their disciplines. Students can choose from among more than fifty majors, over thirty concentrations, and hundreds of electives, which range widely over the arts, humanities, natural sciences, and social sciences. Beside these curricular resources, there are also extensive cultural, athletic, and recreational resources available to students at Columbia. Many opportunities also exist for students to participate in outreach programs that assist less fortunate members of our society.

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Program of Study: Continuing Education students at Columbia University enroll in university undergraduate and graduate courses offered by over forty academic departments and programs in the Arts and Sciences. The courses are taught by Columbia’s renowned faculty and attended by matriculated university students. The rigorous curriculum affords Continuing Education students a unique opportunity to fulfill a wide variety of serious academic objectives. Whether the goal is preparation for graduate school or a change of career, the mastery of a new language, or the pursuit of an intellectual passion, Columbia Continuing Education gives qualified students flexibility and choice. Students may design their own programs of study from among hundreds of undergraduate and graduate courses through the Elective Programs option, focus their study on a given subject through the foreign language, creative writing, and Second-Majors Program options, or enroll in one of the structured postbaccalaureate programs in business, psychology, or classics.

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: The Graduate School of Architecture, Planning, and Preservation offers a series of distinctive programs. The educational objectives of these programs deal in different ways with one open-ended field: urban society and its future. The presence of several areas of study within a single school enables a critical understanding of the forces that affect the building of spaces and the making of cities, so as to encourage appropriate formulation of original concepts, designs, and policies. In each degree program offered, the School aims to develop students’ artistic and intellectual abilities and to provide them, as future professionals, with the information and strategies necessary to deal responsibly and inventively with the issues challenging urban society today. These issues are approached in a non-doctrinaire way so as to yield both significant theoretical proposals as well as pertinent solutions that can be effectively implemented in the contemporary city. Each program with its related studios is structured to permit faculty and students to explore a range of approaches in respective fields, while constantly aiming at social relevance and programmatic innovation. Beyond its specific educational aims, the objectives of the School include basic research in the fields of architecture, planning, and preservation, exchange with other disciplines in the University, and the intensity of experimentation that makes the School part of broader international debates. Historically linked to the University’s world renowned Avery Library, the School takes advantage of its unique location in New York City. It draws vitality from and contributes to the unsurpassed resources available through the city’s art and culture, its outstanding practitioners, scholars, and historians.

Program of Study: The preeminence of doctoral studies at Columbia today is reflected in the size and diversity of the Graduate School – one of the largest private graduate schools in the country with a faculty of over 700 instructors and some 3,200 students. Doctoral programs are offered in 26 arts and sciences departments and in an additional 18 interdepartmental and interschool programs that link the Graduate School with the University’s major professional schools in architecture, the arts, business, engineering, law, medicine, public health, and social work. In addition to the resources available at a great university, Columbia’s doctoral programs draw on the unparalleled artistic, cultural, and scientific environment of the city of New York.

121 full-time and more than 81 adjunct faculty members, are among the finest scholars and teachers in the world. Today Columbia Business School ranks among the best in the United States and around the world and has become the No. 1 business school with an international focus.

Website: www.jrn.columbia.edu

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: Since 1912, the Graduate School of Journalism has been the country’s foremost center for preparing working journalists. The program is a professional one that teaches the craft of journalism in a high-pressure deadline atmosphere. In one academic year students learn to handle the basic contemporary issues in newspaper, magazine, broadcast, and new media. Students are also exposed to journalistic ethics and principles. The same program is available to part-time students over a two-year period, two days a week, year-round. The School’s graduates occupy leading positions in the field as chief editors or publishers of newspapers and other periodicals; as foreign correspondents; and in television and radio, in positions from senior news officers at the major networks to reporters at local stations; and many serve as deans or faculty members at other schools of journalism.

New York, NY 10032
Tel: 212-305-3781 Fax: 212-305-4569
Website: cpmcnet.columbia.edu/dept/pt

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: The Program in Physical Therapy educates students to become physical therapists who examine, treat, and instruct individuals and who work to correct physical deformities, reduce pain, and improve independent movement. Treatment involves the use of physical measures, exercises, and devices. In the two-year intensive program, students collaborate with faculty and clinicians within and beyond the Medical Center to learn patient-centered health care. Graduates have strong clinical problem-solving skills achieved through lecture and laboratory courses relating to the art and science of physical therapy, 24 weeks of clinical internships at hospitals and other sites throughout the country and abroad, an innovative mentor preceptorship program, and design and completion of an independent faculty-directed research thesis. The Program offers an exceptional foundation for physical therapists to become clinicians, administrators, educators, and researchers. Graduates serve at the forefront of health care, assisting children and adults in their quest toward wellness.

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Program of Study: The objectives of the pre-doctoral curriculum of the School of Dental and Oral Surgery are derived from the School’s mission. The School is committed "to prepare students for careers that emphasizes the biomedical sciences and that prepares graduates to practice general dentistry or to pursue advanced training in hospitals and dental schools." Accordingly, the curricular objectives for the first two years strongly emphasize the biomedical science education of the students.

School of General Studies

Carlos Alberto Porro,
Director of Admissions

2970 Broadway
New York, NY 10027
Tel: 212-854-2772 Fax: 212-854-6316
Website: www.gs.columbia.edu

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: The School of General Studies is Columbia University’s college for returning and nontraditional students. General Studies students have full access to the richness of a Columbia education. They take the same courses with the same faculty and major in the same departments as all other undergraduates on the Columbia campus. Students come from a variety of educational and career backgrounds. Some applicants only have a GED while others come with many years of work experience and a substantial amount of college work. Successful applicants, however, all share one thing in common and that is their ability to accept the challenges and, ultimately, the rewards of a rigorous academic program. General Studies is part of an Ivy League university located in the heart of the greatest city in the world, New York. Even though Columbia is an urban university, its campus rivals that of any other Ivy.

School of International and Public Affairs

Robin Lewis, Associate Dean
1427 International Affairs Building
420 West 118th Street
New York, NY 10027
Tel: 212-854-8690
Website: www.columbia.edu/cu/sipa

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: Founded in 1946, the School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA) offers two-year interdisciplinary graduate programs in international affairs and public administration. In the Master of International Affairs (M.I.A.) degree program, students may pursue either a regional or functional concentration. Regional concentrations cover the economics, politics, and history of various regions, and the nine functional concentrations offer career-oriented curricula spanning a variety of regions. Students in the Master of Public Administration (M.P.A.) degree program complete rigorous core requirements to prepare them for management positions in the public sector. M.P.A. students then choose from a series of policy concentrations in areas such as the environment, health care, education, or technology policy to tailor their curricula to their professional objectives. SIPA has two mid-career programs: the Executive Master of Public Administration (EMPA) and the Program in Economic Policy Management. SIPA’s EMPA program, part of the School’s Picker Center for Executive Education, is designed for the experienced executive looking for a practical graduate program but unable to pursue full-time study. The Program in Economic Policy Management (PEMP) provides aspiring economic policymakers with the skills required for effective design and implementation of economic policy in market economies, with an emphasis on developing and formerly socialist economies.

New York, NY 10032
Tel: 212-305-5756 Fax: 212-305-3680
Website: www.nursing.hs.columbia.edu

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: Located on the Health Sciences Campus, Columbia University School of Nursing was founded in 1892 with Anna C. Maxwell as its first director. Since its inception, the mission of the School has been the preparation of clinically excellent nurse practitioners, clinical nurse specialists, and scholars. The School of Nursing was the first in the country to award a master’s degree in a clinical nursing specialty. The emphasis on clinical scholarship at Columbia University is particularly appropriate because of the inter-disciplinary collaboration of the School of Nursing with the other professional schools in its environs. The School of Nursing shares the Health Sciences Campus with the School of Public Health, the School of Dental and Oral Surgery, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which includes programs in Occupational Therapy, Physical Therapy, and Nutrition. Each of these schools adds to the richness and diversity of the educational experience of students and the School of Nursing. School of Nursing faculty have substantial experience in curricula, instructional design, and research, and maintain expertise in their areas of teaching responsibility through participation in local, regional, and national conferences, involvement in scholarly presentations and publications, and faculty practice. Faculty involvement in scholarly and professional activities is substantial. A positive and supportive environment for these pursuits is maintained. The graduates of the School of Nursing are one of its major strengths. Graduates are recruited for leadership positions in practice, education, and management. Curricula are elevated on a continual basis to ensure that graduates meet the needs of a dynamic society and advance the profession while maintaining high academic standards.

School of Social Work

David Yam, Senior Assistant Dean
622 West 113th Street
New York, NY 10025
Tel: 212-854-2856 Fax: 212-854-2975
Website: www.columbia.edu

Hours: Monday through Friday
8:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m.
Saturday and Sunday
10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Program of Study: The School of Social Work’s curriculum is designed to develop analytic and critical thinking skills. Its strength lies in its diversity – in the number of choices available, in the range of approaches employed (short-term/long-term; cognitive/task-centered/psychodynamic), and in the different contexts. The curriculum emphasizes promoting social and economic justice, particularly for populations-at-risk; practicing with diverse populations; and evaluating practice outcomes. From very early days, the School has played a leadership role in social work practice and education, identifying and confronting the changing national social issues. The faculty members of the School have always included nationally and internationally known scholars and educators who have made substantial contributions to the knowledge base of the profession through their lectures and their writings, including the basic texts used today in schools throughout the world. From this faculty have come many of the models for modern social work education and practice-psychiatric social work, bureaus of child guidance, research programs, required field work, and doctoral programs. Through its location in New York, the School provides students with a rich and stimulating learning experience in urban living and the problems associated with it.
Programs of Study: Centrally located within a great research University in the foremost artistic capital of the world, the School of the Arts is positioned to take full advantage of both. Graduate students at Columbia University's School of the Arts are able to access a wide range of disciplines in a renowned academic institution. At the same time, they are able to gain early entry to contemporary professional and artistic communities within the city of New York. The advantageous location of the School offers an eminently dynamic context for the education of artists and provides the basis for an integrated program intended specifically for emerging contemporary artists. Artists teach other artists. This is the underlying tenet of the core pedagogy. The School's commitment to fulfilling this task depends on a faculty of extraordinary talents and professional achievements who are as deeply involved in teaching as they are in the pursuit of their own artistic work. They nurture and encourage talent at every level. However, they also pass on their knowledge about ways of working, media skills, uses of materials and equipment, histories of disciplines and their critiques, and applicable theoretical methodologies. The School also strongly believes in the critical scrutiny of one's own work and the work of others. Students and faculty form communities of artists devoted to this scrutiny at a level of sympathy and specificity unusual in the professional world. The experience of such concentrated attention by peers is the unique culture of the School and acutely shapes the approach of students to their work as professionals. The principal goal of the School of the Arts is to train artists who will define the cultural life of the next generation. Other associations for artistic development beyond the distinguished faculty and student peers include important visiting artists and critics, outstanding guest speakers, and unique internships. The inclusion of four Divisions – Visual Arts, Theatre, Film, and Writing – within the same School opens students to cross-disciplinary influences and affinities. Quality education is the result of all these alliances and pedagogical forces.

The DOME began as a small alternative classroom program in 1973; since then the Project has grown to include a variety of educationally based youth programs. The Academic Tutoring and Mentoring program offers free tutorial services to individuals ages 9-18 years old in one subject area. Each student is paired 1:1 with a tutor who they work with for the duration of the program. Pairs meet one night a week for 1 hour, under the supervision of certified Board of Education Teachers who serve as support to both the students and volunteers. The College Prep Program offers free services to youngsters who need help in securing placement in private preparatory schools, colleges, or universities – and who need help in succeeding once placed. For intermediate and high school students who may be struggling at home or in school, the Program offers the chance to move beyond past problems and excel in new school environments. The agency helps students at risk to earn placement in independent preparatory schools in the northeast.

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Services: Harlem United Community AIDS Center is committed to providing quality HIV prevention and care services in a safe environment while uniting the diverse communities of Harlem in order to address all the needs of people living with and threatened by HIV and AIDS. The Center fulfills its commitment through physical, emotional, social and spiritual empowerment regardless of one's age, sexual orientation or identity, national origin or ethnicity. The COBRA program expands the continuum of care offered by Harlem United by increasing case management services available to individuals and families with HIV/AIDS enabling them to achieve stability and independence in their lives. It ensures access to medical care community-based services, offering opportunities to improve program members’ self-esteem and educate program members about HIV prevention. The Pastoral Care Services is dedicated to meeting the spiritual and emotional needs of program members. It incorporates a holistic approach that provides complementary and alternative therapies. Specifically, the program offers bereavement counseling, esteem building, transitional planning, permanency planning, memorial celebration, home and hospital visits, care-giver support meditation, yoga and visualization techniques, liturgical celebration and quarterly retreats. The Prevention, Education and Policy Department provides HIV services to the communities in Upper Manhattan. The department targets people at risk through a variety of venues including bars, clubs, parks, crack houses, and shooting galleries. Its purpose is to provide information on HIV prevention. The Scattered Site Housing program attempts to bring a person from homelessness to independent living in a caring and cost effective manner. An important component of the Housing Program is the effort to ensure that the children of program members have a home and a plan for their future when their guardians die. The Volunteer Services Department offers a variety of support to agency programs in general and program members in particular while making a conscious effort to recruit a volunteer base reflective of the population served. This is done through unique and culturally sensitive recruitment and retention techniques. Perhaps the program of most interest is the "Buddy Program." Divided into four categories, program members can choose either a "household buddy," "hospital buddy," "traditional buddy," or a "buddy at large." The Women and Children Program provides units of housing to women and children. All services are designed with the intent of increasing the client's empowerment through the development of independence skills. This creates client self-sufficiency that is vital in keeping families together and out of the foster care system. Support groups that address critical issues and training are also provided.

Services: St. Christopher’s, Inc. is a non-profit, non-sectarian agency that has served children and families in need since 1881. Through the development and expansion of many programs, the agency is able to care for a wide population with a variety of comprehensive services. When parents have encountered problems they cannot handle, which jeopardize their children’s well being, St. Christopher’s is there to help them rediscover their strengths and provide them with a complete support system. Families come to St. Christopher’s for a variety of reasons:

- To obtain affordable medical care;
- To learn parenting skills;
- To receive treatment for a substance abuse problem;
- To get connected to a system of support services; and
- To receive temporary care for their children while difficulties are addressed.
A wide range of difficulties can cause children to be placed in care. Foster and residential care is available:

- To help parents recover from or cope with a temporary or chronic illness;
- To help resolve family conflicts or problems;
- To deal with a parent’s employment difficulties;
- To overcome drug or alcohol addictions of a child or his/her family; and
- To help children who exhibit individual problems to grow and develop physically, emotionally and intellectually.

Services: A venerable member of the community, Harlem Hospital Center was founded in 1887. Today, at 400 beds, it is the largest health facility in Harlem capable of treating the most seriously ill. Harlem has one of the finest trauma teams in the nation, and the new Urgent Care Center has reduced waiting time in the busy, 911-designated, Level 1 Emergency Department. Special Asthma Treatment and Pediatric Emergency Units provide specialized critical care. Harlem also operates one of only a few Burn Units in New York City that includes a specialty in plastic and reconstructive surgery to reduce the scarring unique to the minority community. The comprehensive Sickle Cell Center, one of America’s oldest, provides diagnosis, prenatal diagnosis, counseling and genetic counseling. The award-winning model Tuberculosis Clinic, one of only three in the nation, has reduced active tuberculosis cases in Harlem by 75 percent between 1992 and the present. The Asthma Center is one of only six such clinical research centers in the country. The recently opened Ronald H. Brown Ambulatory Care Pavilion provides prompt, culturally sensitive patient services and courteous assistance. In every case, ambulatory care patients are seen by primary care physicians, who diagnose, treat, monitor and help maintain patients’ health. Harlem Hospital Center is a teaching institution affiliated with the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia University. The Residency Program is one of America’s largest training centers for minority physicians. Harlem Hospital is fully accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations.

Services: New York-Presbyterian Hospital is one of the most comprehensive university hospitals in the world, with leading specialists in every field of medicine. The Hospital is composed of two renowned medical centers: Columbia Presbyterian and New York Weill Cornell. New York-Presbyterian is affiliated with two Ivy League medical institutions: Columbia University Health Sciences and Weill Cornell Medical College. New York-Presbyterian, a non-profit institution, is dedicated to helping people from all walks of life. Its two Medicaid managed-care plans are designed to offer the best in medicine to those who are Medicaid-eligible, and the Hospital provides about $100 million annually in charitable and uncompensated care to patients without means. With its geographically broad healthcare system, dedicated staff, modern facilities, state-of-the-art technology, and commitment to quality care, New York-Presbyterian Hospital is uniquely positioned to lead the healthcare world into the 21st Century. Whether providing specialty care to the tiniest newborns, performing complex cardiothoracic surgery, or offering comprehensive primary care, New York-Presbyterian Hospital delivers excellence in health care with compassion and caring. New York-Presbyterian is ranked higher in more specialties than any other hospital in the New York area by US News & World Report.
Circle. The St. Luke's and Roosevelt Hospitals, established in 1846 and 1871, respectively, brought to their merger extraordinary records of medical firsts and commitment to their patients. St. Luke's-Roosevelt also is widely respected for high quality clinical care and for its contributions to research. Throughout its history St. Luke's-Roosevelt also has placed strong emphasis on responding with compassion and sensitivity to the unique needs of the communities it serves, including areas whose residents have multiple social and economic challenges. The Hospital Center's ability to serve these populations is enhanced through relationships with groups including the William F. 1727 Amsterdam Avenue
New York, NY 10031
Tel: 212-694-9200 Fax: 212-368-5608

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Services: The Upper Manhattan Mental Health Center optimizes the ideal of community services and the importance of mental health to the residents within the community it serves. Comprehensive services are provided to families, individuals, the elderly, youth and children in a caring environment by staff who are dedicated to the mission of the Center and to the community. The aim of the Center is to provide broad-based mental health services that enable clients to gain independence, build self-esteem and function productively within their community. Along with mental health treatment, the Upper Manhattan Mental Health Center offers help in preparing for a career and learning the skills necessary to feel comfortable in day to day living.

Intake/Crisis/Emergency Unit is a walk-in unit that provides people of all ages with psychiatric evaluations, crisis intervention, counseling as well as referral services within the Center or to other resources. Through the Pantry Program, emergency food relief is available for community residents who are experiencing temporary financial difficulties and are in need of food. The Adult Clinic offers individual, family, and group counseling services to individuals from 18 to 60 years old who are suffering from emotional or psychological problems. The Adult Continuing Day Treatment Program offers clinical and case management services to severely and persistently mentally ill adults, some of whom also have substance abuse problems. With emotional support and rehabilitation services, men and women from ages 18 to 60 learn the skills of daily living needed to maintain housing, travel safely and participate in community life. The Elderly Clinic is dedicated to evaluating and treating depression. The aim of the Clinic is to improve emotional well-being and support independent living as clients successfully adjust to aging. Psychological Clubhouse is an outpatient program that helps chronically mentally ill individuals develop independent living skills and rewarding social relationships as they participate in recreational and cultural events.

University Settlement Society Children’s Intensive Case Management Program

Hours: Monday through Friday
9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Services: University Settlement’s Children’s Intensive Case Management Program is designed to improve care and support services for children and adolescents who demonstrate complex mental health needs and are at risk of psychiatric hospitalization or residential placement. Case Managers train parents in the use of behavior modification, provide education about childhood mental illness, and advocate for families and children through extensive contact with social service agencies, schools and community service providers.
at I.S. 164 offers academic enhancement, peer counseling, recreational and cultural activities, high school and college preparation, vocational training, substance abuse counseling, health and nutrition, young mother's group, adults ESL and GED classes, and a summer camp. The goal of the Audubon Ballroom Family Center at ACDP is to improve client functioning and reduce symptoms of mental illness while maintaining clients in their natural environments, supporting family integrity, and providing ongoing support to clients and their families until completion. The Center provides services that include evaluation and assessment; crisis intervention; psychiatric evaluation and medication monitoring; psychosocial education; play therapy; women's support groups; individual, group, and family psychotherapy; parenting group; and case management services. As part of the comprehensive approach to mental health services, the ACDP Audubon Ballroom Youth Mental Health Project (ABYMHP) provides prevention, consultation, and educational services to address the mental health needs of youth and their families. Appropriate interventions are given to children and their families in order to decrease the incidents of violence and to prevent possible involvement with the Administration for Children's Services (ACS) and the Juvenile Justice system. Experienced workers listen to problems, make an assessment to determine the level of risk involved and provide appropriate intervention and referrals.

For twenty years, Northern Manhattan Improvement Corporation (NMIC) has provided services that form a critical link to the overall stability of a rapidly growing and changing low-income community. The housing programs minimize evictions and maximize improvements to the housing stock. Employment and social services give residents needed tools for attaining economic independence and stabilizing their home life. NMIC’s client centered programs offer residents a greater voice in the decisions that affect their lives and opportunities. The Community and Tenant Organizing Program assisted the Corporation in allowing disenfranchised residents to make meaningful decisions about their neighborhood’s future. Organizers work in problem buildings to help tenants form tenant associations and obtain repairs. The Corporation assists the Washington Heights Community Union by training its members in setting goals to improve the community and developing strategies to meet its goals. The Economic Development Initiative resulted in a developing family day care network, increased access to capital for micro-entrepreneurs and dedication of funds for training services for neighborhood residents. At NMIC, housing development is a project of community organizing, helping tenants obtain control of the neighborhood’s most seriously dilapidated buildings. Since 1990, NMIC has helped tenants of 8 buildings with 160 units purchase and rehabilitate their buildings. NMIC offers free bilingual civil legal services, including legal representation of tenants and tenant associations to secure stable and safe housing accommodations and avoid evictions. Also, the Corporation provides Public Benefits advocacy to ensure that eligible residents receive appropriate public assistance, food stamps, day care placement, and disability payments. The public benefits unit collaborates with the Fordham Law School clinical program to provide a joint legal clinic at NMIC. Social services include crisis intervention and on-going support, assisting formerly homeless families relocate into permanent housing and promoting self sufficiency, domestic violence programs, health and nutrition education and outreach, referral and follow-up services, assistance to residents of NMIC developed buildings, community education on a variety of topics, and advocacy with public and private institutions. NMIC’s Manhattan-wide weatherization program improves the housing stock through energy-saving direct investments.

8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Services: United Way of New York City’s predecessor organization, The Greater New York Fund, was founded in 1938 "for the purpose of making one annual citywide financial appeal to organized business and its employees on behalf of private social welfare and health agencies in New York City." For the first time in the City’s history there came into being "a united philanthropic movement, supported by all faiths, creeds, and all races." The goal of the Fund was to "assure adequate support for our City’s private agencies, knowing they are essential to the well-being of all who work and all who dwell here." Times have changed since the 1930’s. But the basic mission of United Way of New York City has remained unchanged: bringing people together to address the human care needs in our city. United Way supports a network of the most effective health and human service organizations in the five boroughs. These organizations focus on helping people stay self-reliant and productive through an entire continuum of care. Their services improve the lives of one in two New Yorkers each year. United Way works collaboratively with foundations, corporations, and government to develop comprehensive solutions to complex problems, such as the lack of affordable, quality childcare. The organization administers joint programs that keep at-risk students on track to graduation and that help women with HIV stay healthy and care for their families. United Way monitors funded programs to ensure your donation gets results. United Way makes sure agencies are efficient and effective by providing technical assistance, staff training, help with volunteer recruitment, and more.

In addition to the core independent living services, HILC focuses on serving consumers who show signs of drug or alcohol abuse as a secondary disability. The goal of the Harlem Independent Living Center is to assist individuals with disabilities to live independently. This is done by assisting the individual, as well as family members, friends, and significant others, in acquiring skills that ensure optimal integration of individuals with disabilities. The agency is determined to educate and sensitize the community about the physical, attitudinal, and societal barriers existing in Harlem and in New York that prevent full and equal access by individuals with disabilities. The staff are advocates for persons with disabilities. Workshops on housing issues, legal rights and entitlement, accessibility, employment, and other areas supported by the Americans with Disabilities Act are planned throughout the year.
